

Dreams as Riddles

We, all humans, usually sleep one third of our <sup>of the</sup> life and all we have experienced dreams while asleep. When we are in sleep, our conscious mind <sup>agree</sup> temporarily change to unconscious mind <sup>agree</sup> and dream is happening <sup>tense</sup> under this unconscious mind which is unable to think logically or to evaluate on that basis. Many of our dreams contain personal and hidden messages. Sometimes dreams are predictive. There are many studies to understand dreams but dreams are still mysterious because it is a private theater of our } <sup>A beautiful sentence but how explain it!</sup> soul. <sup>Agree</sup> It could be two or three different versions of the same dream, depending on to whom it was told and what was the dreamer's experience. Koreans believe that dreams are very important in their <sup>agree</sup> life and they relate dreams to their money, <sup>agree</sup> pregnancy, <sup>agree</sup> marriage, competition, employment, examination, moving, or death. Therefore Koreans have their } <sup>main controlling idea</sup> own dream translations and superstitions.

<sup>agree</sup> Korean likes to have a dream of pig because the pig symbolizes money. If they have a dream of pig they buy lotto tickets or gamble. One of my friend in Korea who <sup>agree</sup> have a <sup>agree</sup> wealthy parents <sup>told</sup> said about their parents' dream one day. When he was young, his parents started a new business and they <sup>hope for</sup> wished a success of the business everyday. One day his parents have <sup>tense</sup> exactly same dream at same time at same night. In their dream, they were taking a walk in a forest and a pig was following them for a while. They ignored the pig but the pig kept following them until they arrived home. Soon the pig gave <sup>agree</sup> birth and the pig <sup>atrocious!</sup> increased countlessy. They screamed and woke up together. After the dream, their business was extremely successful and they made fortune. Now their parents' company, Woosung Corporation, is in top 20 in Korea.

Korean says<sup>agree</sup> that it would be a girl or boy when someone<sup>agree</sup> have a dream that one is going to get pregnant. For example melon or cabbage symbolizes girl and pepper or chestnut symbolizes boy. Sometimes Korean prognosticate the baby's fortunes too. In a personal profile of big men, 9 out of 10 introduce their birth dream by family. Y. S. Kim, who was a previous president in Korea had a birth dream which was dreamed by his mother that she hugged sun. And D. J. Kim who is a present president in Korea had a birth dream also by mother. It was a dream of dragon which came into his mother's body. When my mother was pregnant, my grandmother had a dream of black snails. In her dream, she went to a river. She swam and caught fishes. When she returned to home there were five black snails in her bucket. My grandmother used to say the dream to us and "I knew that I got five princesses".

} written meaning

This is pretty but who are the five princesses? you know but the reader cannot be sure.

Also Korean believes that it is a prediction of death if they see any dead ancestor in the dream or it is bad to dream of teeth falling out, which means also death. Also a dream of woman is a bad luck or a dream of floating water is a good luck for new house.

} this is too short for so much content - you need a good topic sentence at least.

It seems to be foolish that superstitions continues among Koreans in the 20th century. But there is no right answer about dreams, even though many studies since early days. The more we know about dreams, the more we must look for an explanation of dreams. Koreans think that dream is god's gift to human only and it will remain a mystery to us. As long as there is no right answer about dreams, I will pass the our dream interpretations and superstitions which regarded as riddles to my children and descendants as my grandmother and my mother did.
