

Transfer to Selective Universities from American Community Colleges

SEMINAR SERIES

Presentations by University of California, Berkeley & San Mateo Colleges of Silicon Valley

DID YOU KNOW...

- 40% of all students who have earned a Bachelor's degree in America start at a community college
- Where you choose to begin college is not as important as where you earn your bachelor's degree
- Some selective universities offer guaranteed admission for community college students
- UC Berkeley admits 2 times more transfer students from community colleges than international students directly from high school (F-1 students)

▶ Learn about how transfer works, what universities are looking for, and why all students should consider community colleges!

WHAT CAN YOU EXPECT AT THESE SEMINARS?

Jointly presented by UC Berkeley and San Mateo Colleges of Silicon Valley and hosted by EducationUSA and the US Department of Commerce, this series of seminars will:

1. Provide official information on the university transfer function of community colleges
2. Explain the process of transferring from community colleges to selective universities
3. Use examples, data, and interactive inquiries throughout the sessions
